"We CAN do it TOGETHER"

A history of American Agri-Women

INTRODUCTION

In reading the history of AAW, one can get a sense of the agricultural industry over the past years and develop a perception of the direction agriculture will unfold in the future. We can detect the strides our organization took over the years and how the agricultural economy is an integral part of history.

AAW is a networking powerhouse of information about all things pertaining to agriculture or that could impact American Agriculture. It is a sharing of ideas and talent to solve or ameliorate the many problems we face. We recognize that we are a vital part of our individual farms, local communities, states, nation and world. We are in an era when all must be involved in and contribute to enhance the future of our agricultural industry.

Arletha DeWall

American Agri-Women President

Note From the Editors

Working on this book, documenting the history of American Agri Women, has been a pleasure. We marvel at the wisdom and insight of our founding mothers, who created an organization both flexible and strong, an organization both feminine and powerful, an organization respectful of the rights of others and herself deserving of respect.

Many AAW members worked on this project. We give special thanks to our President, Ardath DeWall, for her support, encouragement and work, and to our longtime historian Florence Rachwal of Wisconsin, Doris Huffman of Ohio, Arlene Kovash of Oregon, and Victoria Coughlin of Wisconsin. And special thanks to Pat Cahill of Michigan, author of "Women in Agriculture" and charter member of WSAM and AAW. Sharon Steffens, our first National Coordinator, contributed a great deal of insight into our history. Thank you also to Audrey Sickinger, JoAnn Vogel and Jean Ibenoahl. All of these women, with assistance from past national presidents, provided the history of the individual years.

Special credit goes to Jeanne Mertz, Past AAW President, of Kansas, who spent many days researching, typing, proofreading, and communicating with other members asking for additional information and pictures. Her efforts have greatly enhanced the final product. Finally, thank you to all of the affiliates who spent hours and hours putting together their pages to preserve their history for the future.

There are many, many other AAW members who contributed--we thank you all. For any errors, we take responsibility. For the depth and breadth of information, we credit the members of AAW. The finished product belongs to American Agri-Women--the Great Lady of Agriculture.

The heritage of American Agri-Women is proud, a potent force for good and reason. The legacy we pass on to our daughters and sons is precious beyond measure.

AAW President Ardash DeWall and Immediate Past President Trienna Grabowski utilized a grant for their use from Past President Mitzi Perdue to begin this History of AAW's First 20 Years.

American Agri-Women, 1974 - 1994, A Proud Heritage - A Precious Legacy was produced on a Power Macintosh - PageMaker 5.0 by Agricultural Resources & Communications, Inc., Warren, KS. Affiliate organizations provided camera-ready copy.

The Beginning of American Agri-Women

Beset with many serious problems, American Agriculture, as a fragmented industry, lacked a single voice through which to speak to bring about effective change. Many felt agriculture needed to develop a voice to speak for the entire industry. Women were to play an important role in developing a united voice for agriculture.

In 1969, a group of women in Oregon organized as a result of government regulations banning farmers burning fields. Oregon Women for Agriculture (OWA) stood alone, for their husbands were too busy farming to respond and fight the forces that were determining the course of American Agriculture.

Two years later, in 1971, Connie Canfield, unaware of OWA's existence, founded Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan (WSAM). The WSAM's realized that the problems of agriculture were national in scope and required a national organization to respond effectively.

The first official attempt at organizing a national convention of farm women was made when the just-organized Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan chartered a bus to Washington, D.C. to call on the Secretary of Agriculture. Each representative from WSAM made one suggestion to Secretary Earl Butz. Among issues raised by WSAM was one made by Eileen Nutting that WSAM would like to see some very positive action come from this meeting to show your concern for women and the family farm. We would like WSAM to call a national conference of farm women in October or November to make suggestions, bring in speakers and formulate policies for a public relations program. We offer to serve as hostesses for this conference."

When it became obvious such a conference was not a top priority for USDA, WSAM decided to sponsor its own national convention. WSAM's Laura Heuser and Pat Cohill began traveling to speak to and organize other women in Canada and the United States beginning with Wisconsin, Washington and New York.

Several WSAM members went to Oregon and the two groups exchanged ideas on how to counter a common threat. Funds were needed and many organizations and supportive individuals underwrote the women's expenses to travel to testify at hearings; to produce educational materials on agriculture; to organize other groups; and to give speeches to inspire others to action for the industry which provides their income and their way of life.

Especially helpful was the Chevron Chemical Company. Early in 1972, Pat Cohill wrote the president of the company, outlining her vision of a national network of women for agriculture. Women would be able to multiply their effectiveness in influencing those forces which affect the food and fiber producers' self-determination and their ability to feed and clothe this nation and an increasing portion of the world. She requested an appointment to meet with them in their San Francisco headquarters and further requested they pay her traveling expenses. Chevron agreed. At the conclusion of the meeting which included the company's President, Mel Wieringa; Dr. Robert Wallace; Garry Lindahl Ottosen and Linda Barnes of OWA; and Millie Schultz and Pat Cohill of WSAM; Lou Czutin, Director of Chevron's Public Relations Department remarked, "I believe we are witnessing an historic moment." Chevron offered to pay all printing and postage costs involved in organizing a national organization.

WSAM inspired the idea of a national farm women's meeting as previously suggested to Secretary Butz. Farm Wife News (FWN) magazine called WSAM's Laura Heuser to ask if WSAM had considered a national convention and learned that WSAM was in the process of organizing one. FWN offered to join forces and coordinate the first National Farm Women's Forum. WSAM, after reviewing the suggested Forum program, decided that deeper issues affecting agriculture must be addressed. Laura Heuser was the keynote speaker.

WSAM invited all farm and ranch women's organizations to a special coalition meeting immediately following the Forum. The invitation suggested that women's groups interested in establishing a coalition come to the meeting with authorization of their membership to join. Because the purpose of the Forum to WSAM members was always to establish a national coalition, WSAM raised the funds and invited all attending the Forum to a reception to promote the idea and encourage them to attend the coalition meeting.

WSAM's members came prepared with exhibits, buttons, favors, educational materials and a mission that they must convince people of the need for a national coalition. The theme used by WSAM throughout the week was, "WE CAN DO IT TOGETHER!" When the opportunity for action came, the women were unstoppable in their eagerness, meeting at all hours to develop a purpose and goals to form a coalition.

Pat Cahill had arranged with President Gerald Ford's staff to have greetings sent to Sharon Steffens, WSAM State Chairman, to be read to those attending the National Farm Women's Forum. The telegram text follows.

November 12, 1974

The White House

It is a pleasure to extend greetings to your first National Farm Women's Forum and to know that women are joining together for the benefit of agriculture.

We all know that urban people have not lost their basic dependence upon farm people, despite the diminishing numbers living and working on the farms of America, and while we often pay tribute to farms, we too seldom salute farm women for their role in helping meet the food and fiber needs of everyone.

Therefore, let me congratulate you on your objectives to bring about greater understanding of the enormous productivity of farming and the benefit of the U.S. Agriculture.

Gerald R. Ford

Speakers at the coalition meeting were Mr. Joseph Wright, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Corky Larson, a California family grape grower who had personally negotiated contracts with Chavez and the Teamsters; and Sister Thomas More Bertels, Professor of History and organizational specialist, Silver Lake College, Wisconsin, who spoke on "Coalition or Annihilation."

Four organizations came prepared to join: Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan; Wisconsin Women for Agriculture; Oregon Women for Agriculture; and the Washington Women for the Survival of Agriculture. Two other groups, the United Farm Wives of Kansas (Kansas Agri-Women) who had organized in 1973 and Illinois Women for Agriculture (Illinois Agri-Women) who had organized in 1974, ratified their memberships intentions to join the coalition during that first chartering year. It was decided that both individuals and organizations could belong to the coalition. The name, AMERICAN AGRI-WOMEN was chosen, with the organization officially launched on November 14, 1974, at the Marc Plaza Hotel in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Sharon Steffens, WSAM State Chairman, was named Temporary Coordinator of AAW.

A Statement of Purpose and three areas of concern were adopted. The three areas of concern urged that consumers be informed as to the country of origin and the standard of quality of imported products; that government agencies utilize input from the agricultural industry to prevent unnecessary and ill-advised regulations; and that national legislation be passed immediately which would enable farmworkers to use their rights to choose by secret ballot elections, which union, if any, is to represent them.

Working toward a meeting of minds regarding power, how to build it, and how to rein it in once built, are (seated) Marilyn Carney and Corky Larson of California Women for Agriculture (CWA), Sr. Thomas More, Wisconsin Women for Agriculture (WWA), and Gloria Bacchalti (CWA). Standing are Kay Wilson (CWA), Pat Cohen, Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan (WSAM), and Gammie Horton (CWA). Because they worked in the garage of a garage at Lake Arrowhead, the composers of AAW's Call to Power are known as "The Arrowhead Seven."

to Agriculture

Coalition Meeting November 14, 1974

Location National Farm Women's Forum inspired by WSAM and coordinated by Farm Wife Magazine, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Two hundred people attended the meeting.

Program Highlights Three speakers were followed by a business meeting. The program was entitled, "Encounter with Truth." The speakers included Mr. Joseph Wright, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, who spoke on "President Ford's Inflation-fighting Policies and How They Will Affect Agriculture"; Corky Larson, a Coachella Valley, California, table grape grower who had negotiated contracts with both Chavez and the Teamsters; and Sister Thomas More Bertels, Professor of History, Silver Lake College, Manitowoc, Wisconsin, on "Coalition or Annihilation."

Business Official delegates from Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan, Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Washington, Oregon Women for Agriculture, and Wisconsin Women for Agriculture, voted unanimously in favor of a coalition. Representatives from several other groups joined following their return home. Kansas (United Farm Wives of America) had organized in 1973. At a meeting in December, they voted to become an affiliate of American Agri-Women. Illinois Women for Agriculture and AMPI Women also joined upon returning home.

Sharon Steffens of WSAM was elected temporary coordinator of the new coalition named American Agri-Women which would be the first organization to represent all segments of the agricultural industry. The name American Agri-Women, was one of three proposed, and was selected by the delegates.

AAW immediately adopted a Statement of Purpose and identified three areas of concern.

Statement of Purpose: "We, as women's agricultural organizations and individuals, united together to communicate with one another and with other consumers to promote agriculture for the benefit of the American people and the world."

Areas of Concern 1) Urging that consumers be informed as to the country of origin and the standard of quality of imported products. 2) That government agencies utilize input from the agricultural industry so as to prevent unnecessary and ill-advised regulations which created hardships for producers, processors and consumers, and 3) That national legislation be passed immediately which will enable farmworkers to use their right to choose by secret ballot elections which union, if any, is to represent them.

Highlights In June, 1975, AAW participated in a USDA program for Department of Agriculture employees in Washington, D.C., entitled, "Women in Agriculture and the Changing World."

During the first year, a bimonthly mimeographed paper was edited and mailed out by temporary coordinator Sharon Steffens, volunteer secretary Bernadette Rasch, and as many women and children as were available at the moment. Proposed bylaws were also developed and plans for a chartering meeting completed.

Chartering Meeting November 13, 1975

Location Marc Plaza Hotel, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. It was held following the 2nd National Farm Women's Forum, coordinated by Farm Wife News.

Program Highlights The program was entitled, "Setting Goals for American Agri-Women." Speakers included Dr. Sylvan Wittwer, Director of Experiment Stations, on "World Food Situation," and Donna Sweeney, Organizational Specialist, both from Michigan State University.

The bylaws were approved; several areas of concern were adopted; and a slate of officers was elected.

First Annual Meeting November 15-17, 1976

Location Radisson-Muehlebach Hotel, Kansas City, Missouri

The meeting was organized after the National Farm Women's Forum was canceled. Two hundred fifty individuals from 33 states attended.

Convention Highlights The Theme of the convention was "Working Together."

A panel of consumer leaders and farm women; speakers on trade; legislation and labor solutions; threats to cooperatives; and research were program highlights.

The first AAW awards were presented.

Notes Position papers, after much input from the affiliated groups and AAW Committee Chairmen were compiled by Gail McPherson, Goals Chairman. They covered several areas of concern and were distributed in Washington, D.C.

The 1977 Farm Bill was a major concern of many AAW members. Members from several states went to Washington, D.C. to talk with legislators.

In September, Sharon Steffens was invited to the White House for the signing of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977. This recognition acknowledged the impact that farm and ranch women were having.

Mid-Year Meeting Silver Lake College Convent, Manitowac, Wisconsin. It was hosted by Sister Thomas More Bertels and the Wisconsin Women for Agriculture. The bylaws were completely revised under the direction of AAW professional parliamentarian, Mary Mann, Indiana.

1977 - 1978

Second Annual Meeting
November 8-11, 1977

Location Port Plaza Inn, Green Bay, Wisconsin

Convention Highlights "Growing Together" was the theme of the convention.

The program included an energy panel; seminars organization, education and estate tax; Dr. Fran Hill on "The American Farm Wife - Who is She?"; Dr. Randall Torgerson on "Farmers Need for the Capper-Volstead Act"; and Dr. Gordon Guyer on "Agriculture and Red China."

Corky Larson, California, had been concerned that when AAW attained power it would not abuse it as she had seen the United Farm Workers Union do. Thus she called together what is now referred to as the "Arrowhead 7 plus 1." They met in the garret of a garage at Lake Arrowhead, having already researched the work of Ghandi, Saul Allinsky and Bonhoeffer. The result was the creation of what AAW is and how it operates. Besides Corky, the group included Kay Wilson, Gloria Bachhetti, Tammy Horton, Marilyn Carney, all of California; Pat Cahill, Michigan; and Sister Thomas More Bertels, Wisconsin. The "plus 1" included Carolyn Leavens, California, who was not present at the meeting but contributed a key phrase to the "Call to Power."

At that point in time, the American Agriculture Movement was growing. AAW was under great pressure to take a stand. The following statement was approved by the convention and distributed to the media and AAW members:

"American Agri-Women pleads for unity in agriculture. We deplore the farm economics crisis, as well as, the resulting impact to the national economy. We urge AAW members to obtain complete information about the American Agricultural Movement, which is not affiliated with American Agri-Women. Each individual member is urged to participate in the movement to whatever extent their personal opinion dictates. We challenge all farm organizations - the general farm organizations, commodity groups, cooperatives - to join with us to achieve a united voice for agriculture. We need to reconcile long-held philosophical differences regarding agricultural economics by all in favor of common goals that will better insure the survival of the family farm."

Notes In December, 1977, AAW represented the United States (one of two representatives) at the Inter-American Commission of Women involving the U.S. and twenty-two countries. In Washington, D.C. Pat Cahill participated in this meeting sponsored by the Organization of American States

Growing numbers of AAW women were being appointed or elected to boards of directors, Agricultural Technical Advisory Committees, other USDA advisory committees, school boards, and other entities on local, state and national levels.

One of the most important resolutions to come out of this convention was the Definition of the Family Farm. (See page 45). This definition, as well as testimony on many other issues were offered at several of the "Structure of Agriculture" hearings held by Secretary Bob Bergland. This was a major part of the "dialogue" on what the future structure of small agriculture should be.

Notes Contact was made during the year with both Canadian and English farm women who have organized agricultural groups.

USDA sponsored a Farm Women's Forum, in Washington, D.C. in October. AAW First VP Ruby Ringsdorf and the presidents of the National CowBelles and Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE), served as a steering committee with the USDA staff in development of the program which addressed how the family farm could have input into the 1981 Farm Bill.

The first AAW directory, containing the history, annual report, Call to Power, and affiliated organizations' leadership was published. Sharon Steffens served as the editor.

Convention Highlights "Free Enterprise-America's Strength; Agriculture-America's Strength" was the theme of the convention.

Program highlights included Sister Thomas More Bertels discussing "Power"; Patty Newman on "The Mystery of Chavez"; officials from USDA and the State Department; and publication of two convention newsletters and a follow-up edition for the total membership in conjunction with an editor's workshop. A major bylaws change creating a Board of Directors consisting of the Executive Committee and the President of each affiliate or her duly-appointed representative was approved.

Notes AAW accomplishments during 1981 included repeal of the Widow's Tax, signed by President Ronald Reagan, which finally resulted after years of effort on the part of AAW and its affiliates, along with a united effort with many other farm and commodity organizations. Doris Royal, A Nebraska farm wife, was instrumental in getting AAW involved in this very important issue. Laura Lane, Farm Journal Magazine, was very helpful. She wrote many articles in support of AAW's position.

AAW continued to testify, write letters, and express views on various issues besides estate taxes, such as the use of chemicals in agriculture; food and diet issues; labor; and imports. Animal Care was a new issue generating much concern and action.

AAW sought constantly to project a positive image of the role of today's farm woman. This had brought AAW members recognition and credibility in their states and in Washington, D.C. AAW also continued to network agriculture and its organizations by learning more about people across the nation and sharing problems and solutions.

AAW members were no longer the token women on the committee but had become an integral part of committees on which they served. To assist the new administration in 1981, AAW established a Talent Bank of farm women who were interested and qualified for appointments to various advisory committees.

President Ruby Ringsdorf met with over 100 Australian women during a trip to their country, and spoke to them about American Agri-Women and women's role in American agriculture.

Convention Highlights AAW Policy Papers were approved after a great deal of discussion. Jessica Lange, star of the movie "COUNTRY" was presented a scroll signed by the members at the convention. It was to express AAW's appreciation of her sensitive portrayal of country life and the strong, heroic image of the farm wife in the face of adversity. Carolyn Leavens made arrangements and presented the scroll to Ms. Lange in Hollywood.

Wendy Welland, was a guest at the convention. She represented British Women's Farming Union, a group similar to AAW.

Union Carbide offered to present a two-day leadership conference intended to help AAW function more effectively. The workshop would be held at the 1985 mid-year meeting.

A milestone was marked as W.I.F.E. and AAW presidents exchanged convention appearances. Carolyn Leavens spoke to the W.I.F.E. delegates at their convention, and their president addressed the members of American Agri-Women.

1985 - 1986

Tenth Annual Meeting November 10-14, 1985

Location Holiday Inn, Phoenix, Arizona

Convention Highlights A Bed & Breakfast project was discussed. It would be for AAW members traveling across the country.

John Deere announced it would sponsor a contest for AAW members with three winners receiving expense paid trips to the St. Paul convention in 1986.

American Agri-Women voted to support agricultural policy encouraging our farm products to move freely to the markets in the United States and the world. This would lead to a farm program which would stabilize the economics of the industry, without unrealistic high supports, loans, and target prices which lead to unneeded production and result in burdensome surpluses.

AAW supported "THANKS, INC." in its national effort to have U.S. food processors label American grown and processed food.

AAW supported action to modify or withdraw the 1973 Federal Trade Commission Consent Order banning "fat free" milk advertising.

The farm labor unrest was spreading into the Midwest. FLOC (Farm Labor Organizing Committee) was quite active. Farm labor issues were of great concern to the members. One of these concerns was the table grape boycott by the National Farm Worker Ministry.

Notes In an effort to strengthen the AAW education program, subcommittees were appointed to work under the direction of Carol Ann Gregg, Education VP. The committees were: Ag in the Classroom; Ag Women's Leadership Project; Bed and Breakfast; and Consumer Education. By involving more women there was more time to focus on each area.

Chris Wilson had been appointed Legislative Chair. She instituted a "legislative hotline" to be used for critical calls to congressmen, and she wrote a monthly legislative column which was mailed to everyone on the president's mailing list.

Jean Pattibone and Trenna Grabowski were Marketing Co-Chairs. They worked hard on emphasizing the need to utilize alternative crops. (Ed. Note - AAW was perhaps ahead of our time, for while many doors were closed to us, now we are seeing and hearing much more about alternative crops.)

Jean Ibendahl, chairman of the subcommittee for Ag in the Classroom, introduced a new project, the Ag Science Fair project promoting the use of alternative crops.

Mid-Year Meeting Hilton Plaza Inn, Kansas City, Missouri

Many issues were discussed. Meetings on various topics ran late into the night.

Convention Highlights AAW adopted Resolutions:

*In support of soybean quality standards, wheat quality standards, and corn quality standards.

*To oppose casein imports.

*To oppose agricultural products used as tools in negotiations with other countries.

*To oppose the California Table Grape Boycott.

Caesar Chavez had infiltrated into the midwest and had received a "special motion" from the Kansas City, Missouri City Council, to boycott table grapes. AAW members throughout the midwest had made calls and sent letters opposing the boycott. Other farm organizations also expressed their displeasure. The original city council motion was later overruled.

AAW members agreed to do everything possible to encourage the use, on a state-by-state basis, of identification and usage of alternative industrial crops. (Alternative industrial crops as defined by AAW are non-edible and non-feed.)

A Town Hall Meeting was open to everyone who had an issue they wished to discuss. It drew a large attendance.

Notes Chris Wilson, Legislative Chair, planned and organized an AAW Fly-In to Washington, D.C. which included the Executive Committee, Affiliate Presidents and Committee Chairman.

Focus Issues: Food Safety, Animal Rights, Water

Projects: Oral History project, From Mules to Microwaves, was coordinated by Carol Ann Gregg, to document the life-styles of rural women ancestors. (The portfolio of oral and written histories received from throughout the country was presented to the Agriculture Hall of Fame in Bonner Springs, Kansas, at the 1992 Mid-Year Meeting.)

Notes AAW had a booth at the National Extension Homemakers Council Convention in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Fifteen members participated in a Leadership Academy sponsored by CIBA-GEIGY, in Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Carol Ann Gregg was invited to speak at the "Fly in for Freedom."

AAW members visited with DuPont officials at Wilmington, Delaware. The purposes of the trip were to acquaint them with agricultural chemical research, learn the process necessary for chemicals to receive clearance for sale and learn more about manufacturing.

Sandy Grainer and Chris Wilson went to Washington, D.C. where they met with administration and capitol hill officials concerning the reporting of contaminants in a standard unit of measurement. AAW was seeking to have agencies use a standard unit for measurements, in order to reduce consumer confusion over the potential health risks when statistics are reported in the media. (Contaminants include pesticides, natural substances such as insect parts and rodents excrement, and other substances not desired in food or water.) Commitments were made by administration officials to begin reporting contaminants in a standard unit of measurement.

Sixteenth Annual Meeting

November 7-11, 1991

Location State House Inn, Boise, Idaho

Convention Highlights AAW supported the Family Tax Relief and Savings Act of 1991.

The convention included many worthwhile speakers. Members enjoyed a tour to area agriculture related operations.

Other Activities Legislative and regulatory concerns included private property rights, the reauthorization of the Endangered Species Act, middle income tax relief and a capital gains exemption, minor use pesticides, integrated pest management, wetlands legislation, ethanol and proposed EPA regulations, the Farm Animal and Research Facility Protection Act, Adams Fruit and the exclusivity of workers compensation, the deductibility of health insurance premiums, grazing fees, food safety and a reasonable approach to residue measurement and the possibility that the estate tax exemption might be lowered as a part of the Long-Term Care Family Security Act of 1992.

We continued to monitor activities of radical environmental organizations and joined with other groups in coalitions to work for responsible regulations in the environmental area. Past President Mitzi Perdue is writing a weekly column of positive environmental stories which is carried by the Scripps-Howard syndicate.

The annual Fly-In to Washington was a great success under the able hand of Carol Ann Gregg, legislative chair. Many of our women stayed for the annual Farm Women's Forum.

The AAW booth was well traveled among the affiliates. In addition, the national organization had displays at the National Corn Growers Meeting and at the National Extension Homemakers Meeting.

AAW President Trena Grabowski had the honor of representing American Agri-Women at a White House Meeting with President George Bush and representatives of other selected agricultural organizations. She was appointed during this year to serve on the Agricultural Advisory Committee of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Seventeenth Annual Meeting
November 12-15, 1992

Location Holiday Inn, Worthington, Ohio

Convention Highlights AAW supports Oregon Women for Agriculture's recommendation that the United States of America oppose the recommendations of the Earth Summit, June, 1992, in Rio De Janeiro. Any international forum proposing to solve global concerns must base it's decisions on the facts and not on emotion.

Other Activities Legislative concerns included the estate tax exemption, carryover basis and the possibility of taxing capital gains at death, as well as the Endangered Species Act, Minor Use Pesticides, the Delaney Clause and other issues which continued on from the preceding year. We were involved with the Arkansas Best Coalition on hedging of agriculture commodities, worked on the Food Quality Protection Act and other legislation favorable to agriculture. We took these and other legislative and regulatory issues to the Fly-In, and many AAW women stayed in Washington for the Farm Women's Forum.

Fifteen women took part in the Ciba-Geigy leadership training program.

We distributed Ag Day kits from the Agricultural Council of America as a part of the 20th anniversary of National Agriculture Day--the theme was "American Agriculture--Growing Better Every Day."

AAW participated in USDA field hearings on restructuring (Chris Wilson, Communications V.P.), international trade (Ardath DeWall, First Vice President) and agricultural policy and income support (Trenna Grabowski, President).

The American Agri-Women Devotions Book, edited by Eunice Guell, was introduced at Convention and was a great success.

In anticipation of AAW's 20th anniversary, planning continued for a 20-year history book.

A Strategic Planning Committee was appointed to begin developing a strategic plan for AAW's growth into the next century.

Location Wyndham Hamilton Hotel, Itasca, Illinois

Convention Highlights The Associated Milk Producers Women were the first commodity affiliate to host the annual convention. They chose as their theme, "Chicago, don't miss it!"

Other Activities AAW's Strategic Plan was developed through membership surveys and input to a strategic planning committee. The committee proposed a vision and mission statements and four major objectives, with strategies and action items for each objective.

START - the Strategic Action & Response Team was implemented. The START is comprised of a chairman and four coordinators who oversee commodity and issue committees and identify issues which need a coordinated AAW response. The coordinators work with their committee chairs to provide a report from each area for each issue of the VOICE. The START assists the President and officers in planning effective action to address issues.

Notes AAW's position on Health Care Insurance was presented at the Rural Health Care Symposium sponsored by Agricultural Women's Forum, Washington, D.C. Written testimony was submitted to the Health Care Committees of Congress.

A delegation of 20 AAW members attended the First International Conference for Women in Agriculture at the University of Melbourne in Australia. The conference title, "Farming for our Future" recognized the vital contribution made by women in agriculture throughout the world. The conference drew 850 women representing 33 nations.

The AAW History Project documenting the history of AAW and affiliate organizations is underway.

Issues of concern Health Care Insurance; Clean Water Act; Biodiversity Treaty; Property Rights; New Forest Plan; Endangered Species and Worker Protection Standards.

LEAVEN AWARD

At the Mid-Year Meeting, 1977, the previous Award Winners Task Force developed the LEAVEN AWARD. The Committee determined to use the letters L.E.A.V.E.N. as a means of evaluating the candidates. "Leaven" (yeast) is a small element that can interact and influence everything around it. It permeates and raises the elements with which it is mixed. Leaven multiplies its effectiveness for good. American Agri Women presents the LEAVEN AWARD to those persons who, to an outstanding degree, have acted as "leaven", a truly feminine concept since "lady" means "giver of bread."

Recipients of the LEAVEN AWARD include:

Coverage may include REPORTING (news stories, features, documentaries); OPINION (editorials, commentaries, surveys) and PICTORIAL REPRESENTATIONS (photographs, cartoon).

A Tribute to Sister Thomas More Bertels

What has Sister Thomas More Bertels contributed to the phenomenal mobilization of women in agriculture? She has never held an office. She has never dictated policy (she has an occupational hazard of teachers). However, she preached (and still does) the gospel of unification of effort within the agricultural community in order to build a power base in both the economic and political arenas to insure the production of the effects farm and ranch families intend.

Her role is that of resource person, always on tap as needed. Examples: She was present in Milwaukee when AAW was formed as well as when some state affiliates were born; at Lake Arrowhead (CA) when AAW's philosophy and Goals were delineated; on the committee that developed the "family farm" definition; when the Agricultural Women's Leadership Network was in its infancy. She authored a book, "In Pursuit of Agri-Power" that tells what Americans should know about farmers but have never asked, as well as articles, newsletters and letters to editors on issues of farm labor management, land use, environmentalism and biotechnology. Fortunately, Silver Lake College administrators never asked for an accounting of time or money spent in any and all of her endeavors.

Thank you, Sister Thomas More.

The AAW Resource Center

From the very inception of AAW in 1974, it was felt that education was a prime goal. To help achieve that goal, the AAW Resource Center was established in the late seventies.

It has a 501(C)(3) educational rating by IRS which makes contributions tax deductible. With that rating, the AAW Resource Center can receive grants from foundations. Financial support is solicited through grants, gifts and donations.

The Education Committee of AAW elects the 5-member Board of Directors of the Resource Center. The annual meeting of the Resource Center is held in conjunction with the AAW National Convention each year.

The objectives are threefold:

- A. Formulation and dissemination of educational materials portraying true facts of agropolitan America for use by teachers, school children, and the general public.
- B. Improving and supplementing materials pertaining to the agricultural industry --providing factual information.
- C. Initiating and promoting an educational program to advance the interests and welfare of agriculture.

Active membership in the AAW Resource Center is open to all members in good standing in AAW who serve on its education committee. A proposal would expand the board of directors to nine members in 1995 and provide for geographic representation.

In 1993, Mitzi Perdue established the Helen Whitmore scholarship through the Resource Center. This scholarship, in honor and memory of devoted AAW Helen Whitmore of California, who inspired so many young women, provides assistance for young women to attend the AAW Convention for their first time.

The 1994 officers of the AAW Resource Center are Laura Tower, President; Loydæ Grainger, Vice President; Gail McPherson, Secretary; Marjorie Wendzel, Treasurer; and Doris Kullman, Director.

Statement of Purpose

We, as women's agricultural organizations and individuals, unite together, to communicate with one another and with other consumers to promote agriculture for the benefit of the American people and the world.

AAW Definition of the Family Farm

A family farm is a form of business enterprise in which the entrepreneurial decisions are made by a family engaged in the production of food, feed, fiber, forest products and/or flora for profit which provides a major source of income and capital for reinvestment.

AAW's Vision*

We are a force for truth:
a reasoned, nonpartisan voice for the agricultural community to the public.

AAW's Mission Statement*

We will:

- build and strengthen alliances
- communicate
- inform
- cooperate

with individuals and organizations to affect perceptions of agriculture.

from AAW's 1994 Strategic Plan

CALL TO POWER

History will be kinder to us if our capacity to affect change is implemented in the right way and for the right reasons. Our dedication to truth and our identification with the institutions that foster justice and goodwill provide our rod and staff in the struggle to put away untruth and injustice.

When the responsibility for change falls to only a few, the resulting sense of powerlessness is dehumanizing. The feeling of helplessness institutes a plague of apathy and fosters the growth of philosophies that troubles us.

But who has not tasted the sweetness of success in effecting change and been inspired to try again and seek greater challenges? By its very nature, the capacity of one alone to effect change is limited; but the scope expands when the common cares of more than one give birth to unity of purpose. From the beginning of time, the hallmark of any group has been its ability to produce intended effects—the very definition of power itself; the power gained in these efforts is the force which has mobilized mankind.

The use of the power that springs from unity and commonality, and the degree to which the group is organized within the framework of sound, human-oriented principles, will determine its ability to survive the stresses from change to renewal.

The need for power is not shameful, nor is it to be feared. When power is used to overcome injustice and untruth, we must assume that the Hand of God is still at work perfecting His creation.

As we move to build power, we affirm the following principles:

- The constant pursuit of truth must lie at the heart of our purpose and actions.
- The manner in which we seek truth must be thorough and without prejudice.
- As we search for truth, we recognize other's equally valid searches and seek to remain open to their wisdom.
- We are never better than the means we use.
- We reject the use of violence in either action or words; however, one should not confuse vigorous expression of truth with violence.
- Rejecting the idea that it is necessary to foster hate, we are called to this responsibility in the spirit of goodwill.
- We affirm our responsibility for the generations yet unborn.

POWER IS A NEUTRAL CONCEPT, one that is neither good nor bad. Philosopher Bertrand Russell defined it as "the production of intended effects." What effects do we intend? Can we produce these effects? If we can, we have power.

Unfortunately, too many people fear power, identifying it with Hitler, Stalin, the Red Brigade—those who have abused power; more unfortunately, too few people find fault with those who neglect or refuse to use power, which can also be an abuse. "The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing." Said Edmond Burke, British statesman of the American revolutionary period. Put another way: "Whatever happens, somebody plans it and the rest of us permit it. We are all responsible."

We must want and use power; that is, we must produce the effects we intend. What do we intend? For the membership of American Agri-Women, that is no secret. Our intentions are voiced in our seven goals. We intend...

- ...to forge the true image of the farm entrepreneur;
 - ...to foster collaboration with the system;
 - ...to formulate fair market practices;
 - ...to foster cooperation among producers;
 - ...to fight oppressive forces;
 - ...to form leaders.

How many AAW affiliates and their chapters keep these goals in mind when planning policies and actions? What activities are conducted in each affiliate that can be categorized as an implementation of each goal? How many evaluate chapter performance regularly? How successful have we been in achieving each goal? HOW MUCH POWER DO WE ACTUALLY HAVE?

What difference does it make? A great deal of difference! The most important task facing farm entrepreneurs today is capturing a significant degree of influence over the policy-making function as it relates to food, feed, fiber, forest products and flora. If producers were perceived as having power, they would not be ignored when policy is being formulated.

Today, however, farm entrepreneurs are conspicuous by their absence in the arenas of power. That scenario must change. To date, producers have waited patiently for the scenario to change. It won't, unless they themselves change it. "Patience without pressure is perceived as paralysis" said Herb Cohen, the famous negotiator who addressed AAW in San Diego several years ago. The powerless cannot pressure. We have been CALLED TO POWER. What is your response?

Adopted Nov. 14, 1984, Peoria, IL
THE PRIME TRUTH, GOALS, AND STRATEGIES

THE PRIME TRUTH which explains the purpose of AAW's existence.

GOALS which direct our action, and some

STRATEGIES by which we hope to accomplish our goals.

PRIME TRUTH: THE FAMILY FARM SYSTEM MUST BE PRESERVED AS THE BULWARK OF THE PRIVATE ENTERPRISE SYSTEM. (Private enterprise is the best method to develop human potential.)

GOAL I: To present the real identity of American farmers to urban consumers, politicians, media and church leadership.

Strategy A To foster a positive self image.

Strategy B To correct the inaccurate images presently accepted within and outside the agricultural community.

GOAL II: To develop an appreciation within and outside the farming community of the interdependence of the components of the agricultural system.

Strategy A To institute dialogue between the agricultural community and other segments of the consuming public such as labor unions, women's organizations, churches, media.

Strategy B To promote an understanding of the interdependence of agriculture and the consumer.

Strategy C To clarify the interdependence of the diverse segments of agriculture and its support systems

GOAL III: To support a marketing system which makes quality food and fiber available to all on a reasonable cost basis and at a fair profit to the farmer.

Strategy A To ensure farmers are represented in the decision making process whenever price formulas, tariffs, embargoes, aid and trade negotiations are involved.

Strategy B To inform the public about the nature and value of the free enterprise system.

Strategy C To provide standby authority for a supply management option as part of the existing price support program to be used during times when government purchases of surplus dairy products exceed a specified reasonable level, which would provide dairy farm families viable opportunity to adjust their production to the needs of the world.

GOAL IV: To seek that common ground which provides the foundation for a united agriculture.

Strategy A To foster communication and cooperation among the various agri-businesses, farm organizations, commodity groups, farming regions and individual farmers.

Strategy B To promote positive attitudes and understanding among all components of the food and fiber systems.

GOAL V: To effectively stand against coercive methods which unjustly attack the agricultural system.

Strategy A To identify oppressive attitudes and actions which prey upon the agricultural community

Strategy B To respond with appropriate action accepting our responsibility to future generations.

Strategy C To aid the industry in the protection of agricultural commodities.

GOAL VI: To develop allies to broaden agriculture's influence in the market place and in the political areas on all levels: local, state, regional and national.

Strategy A To initiate dialogue with potential allies.

Strategy B To pursue and to develop common ground.

GOAL VII: To develop a responsible and accountable membership that is willing to assume positions of influence in areas that affect the private enterprise system.

Strategy A To discover, to care about, nurture and utilize the capabilities and interests of membership.

Strategy B To encourage members to assume leadership roles in areas of influence.

Strategy C To foster an attitude of constructive dissent and to develop a sense of responsibility to leadership in the face of controversy.

Strategy D To develop and encourage open communication within membership.

Strategy E To develop a responsible leadership and membership accountable to each other.

GOALS are interpreted as being statements which we will always be working on; they cover our total area of operation.

STRATEGIES are interpreted as the variety of ways in which we can carry out goals. We suggested some likely ones. You may wish to change these or refine them...whatever.

ACTIONS are listed under each strategy and are the actual tasks we undertake.

INSTALLATION SERVICE AMERICAN AGRI-WOMEN

It is indeed a pleasure to be with you for the 19th annual convention of American Agri-Women. It is exactly 20 years tomorrow (November 14, 1974) that this organization was formed at the Marc Plaza Hotel, Milwaukee WI at a meeting sponsored by Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan. Next year we will celebrate 20 years of working together as a coalition of farm and ranch women's organizations at the 20th annual convention in Oregon.

Installing Officer: I have the honor this evening to install the officers who will serve for the next year with those officers who were elected last year.

The membership of American Agri-Women have spoken and entrusted you with the mantle of responsibility to abide by and take action under the Statement of Principles: The Call To Power of this organization. You are the "leaven" or the "yeast" in the bread to help us seek the truth, to grow, be caring and effective.

_____ As Treasurer, it will be your responsibility to collect dues and donations, expend funds as designated by the Board of Directors and maintain a complete and accurate record of finances and membership.

This yellow rose is a symbol of loyalty and golden wheat--the prime ingredient of bread, the staff of life.

_____ As Secretary, you will have the pleasant duty of expressing the goodwill and forthrightness of this organization in correspondence and in keeping an accurate record of minutes of American Agri-Women.

This rose is a combination of yellow and pink which symbolizes the sunshine and help your efforts will bring just as we depend on the sunshine to make our crops grow in abundance.

_____ As Third Vice President you are Chairman of the Education Committee and serve as liaison with the Resource Center Board. Education is key to preserving the Prime Truth of the Call to Power--that the family farm system must be preserved as the bulwark of the private enterprise system.

This white rose is a symbol of faithfulness and purity and represents the constant pursuit of truth which we affirm in our principles.

_____ As Second Vice President of Communications, you coordinate publications and media relations in our efforts to forge the true image of the farm entrepreneur and seek greater understanding and appreciation of the food and fiber industry system.

This white and pink rose is a symbol of light and the spread of truth and knowledge to the world around us.

_____ As First Vice President of Vital Issues, you monitor critical national issues, make recommendations, and chair the resolutions process. You serve as an aide to the President and in the future will service this body in that capacity.

This bright pink rose symbolizes the bravery needed to educate other organizations and government bodies regarding issues affecting agriculture for the benefit of all.

..... As President you will communicate with the membership, guide our efforts under the principles and goals of the Call To Power, coordinate AAW's activities, and be a spokesman for the organization.

This red rose is a symbol of leadership, courage and sensitivity in dealing with others as you carry the mantle of American Agri Women.

.. As Past President of AAW, you have demonstrated patience, initiative and leadership in your administration. Your wisdom will be of tremendous value in assisting the Executive Board.

This peach rose is a symbol of honor and loyalty as you work together towards the goals of AAW.

Please repeat after me:

I faithfully and sincerely promise to abide by
The Statement of Principles: The Call To Power
Of American Agri-Women.
I will perform the responsibilities
Of the office to which I have been elected
To the very best of my ability
And that I will do all in my power
To carry out the purposes and vision of AAW.

At this time we will affirm the seven goals of American Agri-Women.

A member of the Executive Board will light a candle as each of the seven goals of the Call To Power are read.

The Prime Truth is that the family farm system must be preserved as the bulwark of the private enterprise system. Or to paraphrase that private enterprise is the best method to develop human potential. These are the seven goals and the strategies to reach them can be found in your copy of the Call To Power.

1. To present the real identity of American farmers to urban consumers, politicians, media and church leadership.

2. To develop an appreciation within and outside the farming community of the interdependence of the components of the agricultural system.

3. To support a marketing system which makes quality food and fiber available to all on a reasonable cost basis and at a fair profit to the farmer.
4. To seek that common ground which provides the foundation for a united agriculture.
5. To effectively stand against coercive methods which unjustly attack the agricultural system.
6. To develop allies to broaden agriculture's influence in the market place and in the political areas on all levels: local, state, regional and national.
7. To develop a responsible and accountable membership that is willing to assume positions of influence in areas that affect the private enterprise system.

Members of American Agri-Women:

You have heard the pledge of your officers and affirmation of our goals. With your help and cooperation they will be able to forge ahead. Do you promise to give them your loyal support? I DO.

Would you all join me in stating our purpose which began 20 years ago tomorrow.

All: We, as women's agricultural organization and individuals, unite together, to communicate with one another/ and with other consumers to promote agriculture/ for the benefit of the American people and the world.

Installing Officer: I declare the Officers duly installed and ready to begin their responsibilities. Congratulations to all of you.

May this coming year be a successful one!!!

As we strive to reach our goals, remember our motto "We Can Do It--Together!!"

(This installation service was written in 1993 by 1st National Coordinator, Sharon Steffens, at the request of President Trenna Grabowski. It may be modified for use by any affiliate of American Agri-Women. Installing officers may need to substitute other flowers besides roses or in combination because of the unavailability of certain colors at different times of the year and local markets.)

AAW Publications

AAW has had many publications over the past 20 years, including the semimonthly newsletter the VOICE of the American Agri-Woman and the annual Directory of American Agri-Women. Other publications have included a resource guide to educational materials; the AAW Cookbook; the AAW Farm Activity Colorbook; and many educational brochures.

AAW MEMBERS ON THE INTERNATIONAL SCENE

In 1980, three ladies from Australia attended the AAW Convention in Hershey, Pennsylvania. The Australians participated in an interesting and educational panel discussion. Lyn Johnson, Wilma Byrne and Dorrie Mason are shown in the photo with AAW leaders Sharon Steffens, Evelyn Landis and Joan Adams

Over the years, many AAW members have participated in USDA-sponsored foreign travel and private ag-related trips. Jean Ibendahl, Carolyn Leavens, Gen Long, Trena Grabowski, Diane Stadtmuller, Mitzi Purdue and others have represented AAW on foreign soil.

Wendy Welland was a guest at the 1984 AAW Convention in Peoria, Illinois. She was representing the British Women's Farming Union, an organization similar to AAW.

Mitzi Ayala Purdue participated in the United Nations Conference on Women, in Nairobi in July 1985. The delegation was headed by Maureen Reagan.

Following the 1989 AAW Convention in Grand Forks, North Dakota, a delegation of AAW members and spouses crossed the border and spent an enlightening and wonderful day with their Canadian counterparts.

The latest AAW international experience was the AAW People to People Trip to Australia in 1994. Twenty members and spouses toured Australia agriculture and attended the First International Meeting of Women in Agriculture, in Melbourne, Australia. Trena Grabowski and Martha Rittinger were two of the speakers from the United States who were featured on the program. The photo below includes most of the AAW delegation.

AAW Activities

AAW members have been involved in a wide range of activities through the years, which have served to accomplish our purpose. Educational and legislative activities remain key endeavors of American Agri-Women and its affiliate organizations. AAW members are continually involved in activities such as classroom education, letter-writing, testifying, and media contacts.

In addition to the Annual Meeting, AAW holds a Mid-Year Meeting each spring. The Mid-Year Meeting focuses on sharing information between affiliate organizations and committees.

The Washington Fly In has become an annual event in June, during which AAW members meet with congressional and policy officials, delivering educational packets to every Member of Congress.

The AAW Leadership Academy is sponsored every other year by Ciba Plant Protection for a group of 15 AAW leaders.

In addition to AAW meetings and events, AAW, both as an organization and through individual members, has actively participated in farm/agriculture women's forums through the years.
