Renewal & Rebirth

2021 AAW Convention

Plans are well underway for an in-person, patriotic theme, 2021 AAW convention and annual meeting. Enjoy the year-round sun and warm temperatures in the Valley of the Sun, November 12 – 13, where we will gather at the Embassy Suites by Hilton at the Airport in Phoenix, Arizona.

Events include a professional Leadership Workshop Thursday evening, November 11 when First Vice President/President-Elect Heather Hampton-Knolle will kick off our gathering with a very special pre-convention workshop on “True Colors – Understanding and Applying Communication Styles for Improved Team Work.” We know Better Communication = More Effective Teams but “Can you hear me now?” The question shows that communication is a two-way street. The information and skills gained from this facilitated workshop will serve members well in their affiliates, serving on AAW committees, and in their own business and personal interactions. This high value workshop is included with your convention registration fee. Our Keynote Speaker is a Past President of American Agri-Women, Mitzi Perdue, who will tie her speech to our “Renewal and Rebirth” agenda and add: “Why and More Important – How?” We all want to know how to combat animal activism so our speaker Betty Doke, Outreach Coordinator for “Protect the Harvest” will walk us through how to communicate facts when faced with misinformation about our livestock and farms.

Business meetings will dot the week-end, highlighted by a Syngenta Leadership at its Best reception and a beautiful Installation of Officers and Awards banquet. Make your plans now to include our exciting National Convention. The usual workshops and tours will not be available due to the short time we have but lots of interesting surprises will await you in Phoenix. Individual excursions before and after convention are encouraged.

Phoenix is close to the Grand Canyon National Park, red rock formations in Sedona, the ponderosa pine-covered mountain town of Flagstaff and Saguaro cactus in the Sonoran National Desert landscape. Tucson is less than two hours south of Phoenix. November is the best time to visit Phoenix as temperatures are in the upper 60’s, 70’s and low 80’s. Check out ideas at: https://visitphoenix.com for experiences that meet your fancy. A tentative convention agenda is available on our website at: www.americanagriwomen.org/national-convention/

The Convention Committee is actively pursuing new and alluring activities for our members during convention, even events for the spouses, if possible. Bring your hats and boots and be prepared to enjoy your time in the sun in warm Phoenix, AZ.
President’s Report

Greetings from American Agri-Women,

Our fall season here in Northern Minnesota started with apprehension because of the weather conditions. On our farm we still are not sure what the final harvest will look like. I know some of you have just the opposite of our drought and the rains don’t seem to quit in the southern states.

The convention committee is hard at work planning for Phoenix, AZ. Hopefully we have great weather and allows attendees to stay longer and see the many sites around this area. Because of the late notice in planning this event we don’t have scheduled tours, but we will have places to visit on your own. My husband, Bill, will be around to help and our vehicle can hold eight with the driver. We also have others that are volunteering to drive.

The real purpose of Convention is to receive reports and enjoy leadership sessions. At the membership meeting we will vote on the women running for office. The nominating committee has worked hard and spent many hours approving wonderful candidates. The chosen speaker are an integral part of convention that help us to understand why women choose to be a member of this strong organization. Looking forward to hearing and visiting with them all.

This last month we have continued to work on our AAW program STANDUPSPEAKOUT4AG. With all of the country in a scrambled mess we can already see that trade may be a high priority. Who knows what will happen with our borders that could lead to issues with agriculture workers. Another fear is rising prices of food and crop inputs, we were just notified to multiply the price of inputs by three times. Also along with fuel shortages and rising costs farms will be vulnerable. All of these issues make STANDUPSPEAKOUT4AG a viable program. We need to stand up and speak out for agriculture. We will be handing out materials on this project at convention. The convention committee has collected Silent Auction items I think we will all really like. Silent Auction brings in funds for AAW and those funds will be used to keep our organization moving forward. I will be taking part in the Crop Life America Legislative sessions to be held in Miami during September. Just as a side note, I will not be using any funds for travel as all the Executive Committee is committed to rebuilding our treasury.

I also have taken part in an amazing amount to White House calls along with Ruth Jensen and other interested parties. The American Agri-Women have a good relationship with the White House program coordinators. I am still hoping to visit D.C. before the Convention as I have been invited to a visit at my legislator’s office that includes several other agriculture organizations.

If there are questions about Convention, please don’t fail to ask me.

Sincerely,

Karolyn Zurn

Finding Your Voice

Donita Whitney

"As a little girl, and later as a teenager, I took my rural farm upbringing for granted. I never had a second though as to my lifestyle being anything unique or impactful to the world. In fact, when I started college, I spent some time thinking urban lifestyles and non-agriculture careers were more sophisticated and glamorous than the serene wholesome life where I was raised. Fortunately, by the second semester of my sophomore year of college, I unconsciously had gravitated to my roots and happened to enroll in an ag class. It was the turning point of my life for defining purpose. I quickly discovered that my true, genuine passion for all aspects of life (values, career, family, faith, etc) were encompassed by agriculture and my farm rearing.”

"Because AAW is not an organization that focuses on a single agriculture entity, but rather represents the diversity of all/every aspect of the food chain for human and animal existence, I have valued my AAW membership because it serves as an organization that reinforces my advocacy for all of the world to realize and appreciate agriculture as the life line to every culture, every country, and every citizen on earth!"

Bridging the Farm to Research Gap

Heather Hampton-Knodle shares her experiences with agriculture, policies, research solutions and more.

Field, Lab, Earth, a podcast that is hosted by Abby Morrison, shares information about past and present advances in the fields of agronomic, crop, soil, and environmental sciences talks with Heather Hampton-Knodle about the bridging the research to farm gap.

"Research is crucial in helping farmers with anything from increasing yields to fighting climate change, to managing nutrients and more. However, it’s important that research solutions are feasible for those who are going to implement them. In this episode, Heather will walk us through her many roles in agriculture, the perspective they’ve given her, and how researchers and farmers can better collaborate to close the farm to research gap" says Morrison.

Hampton-Knodle’s currently farms to earn her income but her career path includes public private statewide economic development corporation. To add to her busy lifestyle, she owns her own business and has served on boards, one being American Agri-Women.

Nominations: Foundation Board

Chris Wilson

Chris Wilson and her family farm and ranch in Kansas. Their operation includes a commercial cow-calf herd that her father and grandfather started in 1944. They also raise dairy goats, horses, and specialty crops, and have hosted an annual fall festival for the past decade, as well as weddings and other agritourism events. She was raised on a grain and livestock farm in Illinois and holds a degree in Agricultural Sciences and a Juris Doctorate.

Wilson formerly served as Asst. to the Director of the Illinois Dept. of Ag and Asst. to the Secretary of the USDA where she was Director of the Office of Public Liaison. She owned an association management firm and worked with the Kansas Legislature on ag and property laws for over 25 years, along with making ag educational materials. Wilson previously served as Deputy Secretary and General Counsel of the Kansas Dept of Ag. In AAW, she has served on the EC as VP Communications, First VP, and President. She is a Past President of Kansas Agri-Women and served as AAW Fly-In Chair and Legislative Chair for many years. She received the Illinois Agri-Women Hall of Fame Award.

Arlene Kovash

Arlene Kovash was born and raised outside of Phoenix, Arizona, where her family had a small acreage, mainly raising sheep and pigeons. Of course, they had the requisite chickens and garden. She was active in 4-H from age 10 to 18, winning a trip to 4-H Club Congress in Chicago with her clothing project.

Arlene married vocational ag teacher Paul Kovash in 1961 and the couple moved to Oregon in 1964, where Paul taught vo-ag in Corvallis for the next 30 years. Paul was a farmer wanna-be from the time he was small and so when they got to Oregon, they bought a small farm where they raised market hogs. They lived there for 6 years, then bought a larger farm, then on to a larger one after that, where they have angus cattle and hay. Paul also trucked hay from central Oregon and sold it in the Willamette Valley where we lived.

Arlene has always been involved in promoting agriculture through Benton County and Oregon Farm Bureau, Polk County Women for Agriculture, Oregon Women for Agriculture, and AAW. She has served as an officer in her county farm bureau and county, state, and national women for agriculture groups, as well as being on several committees through the years, plus writing her county farm bureau newsletter and editing both the Oregon newsletter for 10 years and the AAW newsletter from 1994—2008, [I think] and maintaining the AAW directory. Arlene feels she can contribute to the foundation board because of her leadership experience as an officer and committee member, her editing and writing experience, and from attending almost all national meetings since 1995.

Convention

Speaker Bios

Mitzi Perdue is a former rice grower in California, and she likes to joke that when she and poultry magnate Frank Perdue first met in 1983, they decided chicken and rice go well together! Mitzi was President of AAW from 1987 to 1989, and she met her husband in part because of her presidency.

Recently she wrote How to Be Up in Down Times. Her co-author is Mark Victor Hansen, famous for the Chicken Soup for the Soul series. She also writes and speaks on combating human trafficking. She feels as honored as a person can be to share ideas on the way forward for AAW.

Betty Doke is a strong advocate for agriculture. As the Outreach & Event Coordinator with Protect The Harvest, Inc., Betty coordinates events and builds relationships with PTH partners with outstanding communication abilities. Betty supports animal welfare & animal ownership in her outreach and educational activities with the knowledge of family farming experience.

New Convention Session

Roles & Responsibilities of Non-Profit Organizations

This session will focus on the responsibilities of a non-profit organization and the legal duties and potential liabilities of officers and board members.

Chris Wilson is an attorney with an extensive background in non-profit law. For over 20 years, she has headed an association management company and served as the executive officer of many state associations, working with and advising non-profit organizations at the local, state and federal levels.
The hotel will be offering free breakfast and complimentary evening reception for registered guests so if you have a roommate, be sure they are registered with you. This resort style property also offers amenities such as 24-hour fitness center, an outdoor swimming pool and whirlpool.

Booking your hotel room for convention? A few tips

AAW will host its 47th annual convention November 12-13 at the Embassy Suites by Hilton Phoenix Airport in Phoenix, Arizona.

If you plan to participate in the Professional Leadership Workshop the day before, Thursday, November 11 you will want to book for the night of the 11th and will receive the AAW rate.

Here are three things to know when booking your hotel room:

1. How to book:

   You can simply go to this link for instant access to the hotel booking site:
   https://group.embassysuites.com/AmericanAgriWomen

   Be sure to use the following Group Discount Code: AAW

2. When to book:

   Book early. We anticipate rooms will go quickly in our group room block, especially if your travel plans include a stay the Sunday night after convention. Plan to book immediately.

3. Who to contact:

   For questions about the hotel or to check hotel room availability, contact:

   Ruth Jensen at msjensen@comcast.net.

   The last day to reserve a room in the convention block is October 11, 2021.

Please note:

The hotel will be offering free breakfast and complimentary evening reception for registered guests so if you have a roommate, be sure they are registered with you.

This resort style property also offers amenities such as 24-hour fitness center, an outdoor swimming pool and whirlpool.

Nomination: VP of Communications

Laura Hart

Laura lives on Hart farms with her husband, Vic, where they raise corn, cotton, wheat and sorghum. Hart and her husband farm the same land that Vic’s great-grandfather T.W. Hart farmed in the south eastern part of Castro County in the Texas Panhandle/South Plains. Their place, Pioneer Farms, was recognized by the Texas Department of Agriculture Family Land Heritage program that honors families who have owned and operated a continuous agricultural operation for 100 years or more in 2011. She is a founding member along with her daughter, Adrienne Synatschik, and Pamala Sweeten of the Texas Agri-Women South Plains Chapter and past president.

Laura has been a vocal advocate of agriculture for many years. She has been honored at both 4-H and FFA banquets for her parent leadership. Laura has served as President of the Hart Buyers Club, Hart Athletic Booster Club, and as a member of the Hart Independent School District School Board. Laura and Vic raised two sons and a daughter and have three grandsons and five granddaughters. All three children hold degrees in agriculture and are involved in the agriculture industry.

Nomination: Treasurer

Kathy Goodyke

Kathy Goodyke is honored to be appointed as the current interim AAW Treasurer. Her involvement in AAW began with her first AAW Convention in 1994 at Tigard, OR. Those friendships over those several days are still close to her. Since that initial convention, she has attended many others along with Mid-Years. She is currently the lead on Taxes in the Committee of Governmental Issues, preparing a White Paper for the 2021 Fly In. Kathy is the Minnesota Agri-Women Treasurer and past secretary. Receiving an associate degree in accounting began her career with AgCountry in doing the farmers’ bookkeeping and preparing financial reports for the loan officer and tax preparer. With a love for education, Kathy went on to receive a BS in Nursing. She worked in community, public, and hospital nursing until 2007. When her husband needed help on the farm, she was put in a tractor. From then on, being able to work in the field and see what she was able to do, put her careers on permanent hold. She worked the ground, ran the grain cart and did a lot of her own equipment maintenance. It was full-time enjoyment. Since retiring the farm in 2016, she has become active in the area seniors center as the secretary, grant writer and financial chairperson. She enjoys quilting and being a member of the church quilt group, for which she is the treasurer. Kathy and her husband remain busy with maintaining the farm site and with their daughters and families and will always be keeping an eye on the fields.
Nomination: President

Heather Hampton-Knodle

As a farmer, past communications consultant and association manager, Heather Hampton-Knodle is dedicated to developing rural economies through incentivizing investments in telecommunications, innovative workforce development and enabling entrepreneurship. Heather was the founding chairman of the Montgomery County Economic Development Corporation, the Central Illinois Economic Development Authority and the Montgomery CEO (Creating Entrepreneurial Opportunities) program. She currently serves as the appointed Vice Chairman of the Accelerating Broadband Deployment Working Group of the Federal Communications Commission Precision Agriculture Task Force and as a Citizen Member appointee to Illinois Governor’s Rural Affairs Council. Heather farms with her husband Brian where they and their four children, ages 12-18, grow corn, soybeans, and wheat and manage a small herd of black Angus cattle.

Since Heather joined Illinois Agri-Women and attended her first AAW Convention in 1995, she has served as Illinois affiliate Secretary and President, chaired the program and planning for two national conventions, served as AAW Secretary, First Vice President, Governmental Issues Chairman, Farm Bill Task Force Chairman, Water Resources and Rural Development Chairman. She was nominated by founding member Trenna Grabowski to receive the LEAVEN Award.

Nomination: 1st Vice President
By Marcie Williams, Nominations Committee

Rose Tryon

Rose Tryon is a 5th generation farmer who grew up on a beef, dairy, and potato ranch in Northern California. Rose and her husband, Michael VanCott, are actively involved in the operation of her family farm in Del Norte County, California. Rose is a retired District Attorney investigator who specialized in child abuse, sexual assault, and domestic violence investigations. She is also a full-charge bookkeeper specializing in agricultural accounting. Her career has spanned over twenty years. As a result, she has a unique background and has work experience in various facets of farming and law enforcement. On November 8th of 2018, Rose and her husband, Michael, lost their home in the devastating forest fire that destroyed the town of Paradise, California. Together, they are rebuilding their home in Paradise. In November of 2020, Rose was elected to office and is currently serving as a member of the Paradise Town Council.

As a member of California Women for Agriculture, Rose has served in multiple capacities on both the state and local levels of the affiliate. In January 2020, she was installed as the 25th State President of California Women for Agriculture. Her term will end in January 2022. Rose has been active in American Agri Women since 2011. She served for six years on the American Agri Women foundation board of directors. For the past several years, she has served as the AAW Natural Resources Co-Director.

American Agri-Women officially began November 14, 1974, founded by four state women’s agriculture groups which had formed: Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan; Wisconsin Women for Agriculture; Oregon Women for Agriculture; and the Washington Women for the Survival of Agriculture. Kansas Agri-Women (then United Farm Wives of Kansas) and Illinois Agri-Women (then Illinois Women for Agriculture) joined soon thereafter.

Today, AAW has more than 50 state and commodity affiliate organizations as well as individual members throughout the country, representing tens of thousands of women involved in agriculture. Throughout the history of AAW, our members have been actively involved and making a difference in legislative and regulatory matters at the local, state, and national levels. We have also been instrumental in student and consumer education about agriculture, having initiated the Agriculture in the Classroom program at the national level are integrally involved in national and state programs still today.

American Agri-Women has reached the tremendous milestone of now celebrating 40 years of advocating for agriculture; educating legislators, regulators and consumers; and empowering its members.

AAW is now the nation’s largest coalition of farm, ranch and agri-business women. Our members are ranchers, farmers, producers, agri-business professionals, educators, consumers, students, researchers and many others. New national affiliates have joined us recently, strengthening our voice and influence.

Agriculture in the Classroom Takes on Iowa

By: Jacquie Compston

The 2021 National Agriculture in the Classroom Conference was held in Des Moines, Iowa June 28 to July 1, 2021. The “Fields of Dreams” Conference was attended by over 400 teachers from across the United States. American Agri-Women participated as an exhibitor and attendee. AAW was represented by Vice President of Education, Jacquie Compston, President-Karolyn Zurn, and Government Affairs, former chairwomen-Deb Whalen.

Iowa was an excellent location for the “Fields of Dreams” being the largest producer of corn, pork, eggs, and renewable fuels. Innovative agriculture concepts that can be presented to students K-12 in inspiring ways were the focus of the programs presented.

The use of agriculture topics to teach reading, writing, nutrition, math, science, social studies, economics, and business inspires students and teachers by using diverse concepts. Visiting and sharing agricultural experiences with teachers throughout the Country was exciting and gratifying.

One of the challenges facing all of agriculture is the continuous need for training and preparation of the workforce. Agriculture in the Classroom (AITC) has risen to the challenge by providing K-12 programs and teacher training, education, and demonstration resources both online and through conferences and workshops. This years Conference was held in a hybrid form through online and in person formats.

Agriculture literacy is very important to promote the understanding of food, fiber, and renewable fuel production. With natural and man-made disasters threatening the world every day, it is increasingly important to educate and inform students and educators about agriculture.

American Agri-Women Foundation

Daughters of American Agriculture Scholarship Award Winners

By: Ardath DeWall

Daughters of American Agriculture Scholarship was created to honor the memory of those courageous and adventurous pioneer women who played such an important role in the founding of this nation and encourage the present generation to continue their education in agricultural pursuits. These two scholarships ($1,000 each) are available to any farm, ranch or agribusiness woman or her daughter to pursue accredited courses in agriculture leadership, communications, rural sociology, medicine, or any other courses directly related to agriculture.

We have had another exciting Scholarship year, with excellent applications! Even with 117 applications, each recipient would be deserving of a scholarship.

Savannah Downs, Bakersfield, CA, received the High School Scholarship, (18-23 years old). She will attend University of California-Davis, with a goal to receive her Bachelor’s Degree in Plant and Soil Science. From there, she will attend post graduate school to obtain my Master’s Degree.

Katie Sondericker, Attica NY, received the Continuing Education Scholarship, (24+years old). She is currently enrolled at Pennsylvania State University, BS in Animal Science with a minor in Poultry and Avian Sciences. Sondericker has specialized training Cornell University College of Veterinary Medicine since 2019 to add her education. Goal upon graduation, with DVM degree from Cornell University in 2023 is to practice as a food animal veterinarian (main of interest are dairy cattle and poultry.
